

Mastek recognizes the outstanding contribution of NHS key workers by covering its' Reading office with rainbows drawn by children of Mastekeepers.

14.11.19, Reading, UK: Mastek recognizes outstanding contribution of NHS key workers by decorating Reading office with rainbows drawn by children of Mastekeepers.

Reading based technology company Mastek wanted to show its' appreciation of the work of NHS staff during the Covid-19 crisis. With the Reading office closed and all employees working remotely, the company ran a competition for the children of its' employees (Mastekeepers) to draw the very best rainbow they could to show their gratitude to NHS staff.

With a prime location in sight of the platform of Reading rail station, Mastek has displayed these works of art in the windows of its' offices, so that key workers travelling by train get a little boost from this expression of gratitude from children in the local community. [insert picture]

More than twenty five pictures were entered and the quality of submissions was so good that five winners were selected and received? .

John Owen, CEO of Mastek said

“ Mastek is a very caring family-centric organization and we wanted to find a way to show our gratitude to NHS key workers as one big family. We hope this small gesture raises the spirits of those that see it, both the people of Reading and the commuters using public transport to deliver vital services.”
